COMMON GOOD CONFERENCE EXCEEDED EXPECTATIONS

Enthusiasm Grew and Suspicion of Exterior Motive Was Dissipated at Meetings Progressed—Movement's Best Work Remains to be Wrought Through County Rallies. Steps Toward Organization Already Taken in Some Sections—Success of Such Undertakings Conditioned on Whether They Be Non-Political and in Truth "For the Common Good"—President Tate on Future of Conference.

Columbia, Aug. 9.—"The first State Conference for the Common Good has greatly exceeded our expectations, in attendance and enthusiasm," said the president, W. K. Tate of Columbia, yesterday. "Several hundred men and women, representing all sections of the State have been in attendance. Subjects of vital importance in the life of South Carolina have been discussed, and all the addresses have attained a high standard of excellence. As the meetings progressed the enthusiasm gained in momentum. In spite of all that had been said at the preliminary meeting and in the printed matter distributed by the executive committee, there were a few people who at the beginning of the conference still suspected that it was animated by some hidden or ulterior motive. As the conference and every one who attended its sessions went home feeling that it was truly 'a Conference for the Common Good.'"

"The Conference did not attempt in any way to cover all the needs of the State," said the president. "A few topics had been selected which the committee deemed most pressing and attention was concentrated upon them. The dominant note was rural, though the industrial life of the State came in for a share of attention unusual in the history of South Carolina conventions. The keynote sounded by Clarence Poe in his programme for the development of rural community life in the South, with many variations, was well sustained throughout the conference. Community corporation, marketing, the work of the country church, the effects of home ownership, the country school, and systems of rural credit were simply subtopics of this general theme."

"On the industrial side the conference considered seriously the effects of home ownership in mill villages and methods of bringing this gradually to pass. The address by Mr. Hollis, giving an individuality and a community spirit in typical cotton mill villages, was a revelation to many of the hearers."

Substantial Results.
"The subsidiary conferences amply justified their existence. Perhaps the largest of these were the farmer's conference and the woman's conference. The conference of high school and college representatives showed a discussion of the topic Mutual Adjustments Between High School Courses and College Entrance Requirements is destined to produce substantial results. The appointment of a committee to formulate a uniform college entrance blank which would save the time and energy of the high school principal and the college entrance committee is typical of the results of the conference."

Miss Mary Miller is with her friend Miss Stewart at Coronaca.

Mr. R. S. Davenport of Augusta, and little daughter, he with Mrs. N. C. Davenport.

Miss Irene Billard of Clinton, taught in the high school department here last year. She was re-elected. Since she has been offered a position at Rindtrance committee is typical of the spirit which animated all the special conferences.

"It was the judgment of all in attendance that another conference should be held next year. In accordance with the plans of organization agreed upon at the preliminary meeting in June, the executive committee then selected will remain in authority until the next conference, thus enabling them to cooperate in the plans for the county conferences."

County Conferences.

"The committee feels the great work of the movement will be done in the county conferences which will carry the idea to all the people of the State. It is not the purpose of the executive committee to supervise or even suggest the methods of organization and the topics of discussion in the counties. The conference is not an organization; it has no constitution and by-laws. It is rather a movement and depends for its force upon the spirit which animates it. It bases its expectation of results on the theory that when a clear, definite idea becomes the possession of all the people, it will finally bring itself to realization. It invites patriotic men and women in the various counties to proceed along similar lines in the organization of a forum for the discussion of things which are to them worth while. The executive committee offers to county organizations looking to this end. It suggests that representatives of the county press, the church, the school, the farmers, the physicians, the lawyers, the industrial workers, and the business men come together in a preliminary organization, to be held later in the summer or in connection with the county fairs in the fall."

"The subjects for discussion at the county meetings will naturally vary with the special interest of the county. The kinship with the State conference will be determined by two questions only: First, is the movement entirely non-political? Second, does it exist for the common good? Several of the counties have already taken steps looking toward an organization. It is to be hoped that before the year closes the movement will gain headway in a majority of the counties of South Carolina. The president and secretary of the general conference invite correspondence with men and women in the counties who are willing to assist in the promulgation of the movement." W. K. Tate, Columbia—State supervisor of elementary rural schools—is the president of the conference. The secretary is Albert S. Johnstone, secretary of the Greenville Chamber of Commerce.—The State.

dolf Macon College where she graduated, and has asked the trustees here to let her off, so she can accept that work, the trustees here will have to look out for another teacher.

We had an abundance of rain the past week. On Sunday and Tuesday good rains fell here and on Thursday quite a storm of wind, rain and some hail. Corn was blown down badly, a few trees were uprooted, and two chimneys to Mr. E. B. Rasor's house was blown down. The thunder and lightning were terrific for about one hour.

A meeting is in progress at the Methodist church this week.

Costly Treatment.

"I was troubled with constipation and indigestion and spent hundreds of dollars for medicine and treatment," writes C. H. Hines, of Whitlow, Ark. "I went to a St. Louis hospital, also to a hospital in New Orleans, but no cure was effected. On returning home I began taking Chamberlain's Tablets, and worked right along. I used them for some time and am now all right." Sold by all dealers.
